- For the best accuracy random forest machine learning algorithm is used for churn prediction.
- Splitting data into training and testing sets, trained and evaluated multiple models using metrics like accuracy, precision, recall, and F1-score.

Task 6: Business Recommendations

1. Identify High-Risk Customers:

Utilize the churn prediction model to identify customers at a high risk of churning. Focus on those with specific characteristics, such as short tenure, high monthly charges, or month-to-month contracts.

[58]: # Assuming 'CustomerID' was dropped during training, and you want to add it_

      # Add 'CustomerID' back to X_test
      X_test_with_customer_id = X_test.copy()
      X_test_with_customer_id['customerID'] = customer_ids_test

      # Now, X_test_with_customer_id contains the 'CustomerID' column
      X_test_with_customer_id

3. Promote Long-Term Contracts:

Encourage customers to opt for longer-term contracts, as these tend to have lower churn rates. Provide incentives such as discounted rates for customers signing up for one or two-year contracts.

[64]: # Identify customers eligible for long-term contract promotion eligible_customers = df[df['Churn'] == 'No']

[65]: # Implement promotion for long-term contracts
for index, customer in eligible_customers.iterrows():
    customer_id = customer['customerID'] # Replace with your actual customer_ ↪ identifier
    contract_type = customer['Contract'] # Assuming 'contract_type' is a ↪ categorical variable

    # Check if the customer is on a month-to-month contract
    if contract_type == 'Month-to-month':
        # Implement promotion for long-term contracts
        # Example: Offer a discounted rate for one or two-year contracts
        promotion_offer = "Sign up for a one-year contract and get a 10% ↪ discount!"

    # Print or store the promotion offer for each eligible customer
    print(f"Customer ID {customer_id}: {promotion_offer}")
